

The Tragidie

Glo. Tush, that was in the rage:
Speake it againe, and euen with the word,
That hand which for thy Loue did kill thy Loue,
Shall for thy loue, kill a farre truer loue,
To both their deaths thou shalt be necessary.

La. I would know thy heart.

Glo. Tis figured in my tor que.

La. I feare me both are false.

Glo. Then neuer man was true.

La. Well, well, put vp your sword.

Glo. Say then my peace is made.

La. That shall you know hereafter.

Glo. But I shall liue in hope.

La. All men I hope liue so.

Glo. Vouchsafe to weare this ring.

La. To take is not to giue.

Glo. Looke how this ring incompasseth thy finger,
Euen so thy brest incloseth my poore heart.
Were both of them for both of them are thine.
And if thy poore supplyant may
But beg one fauour at thy gracious hand,
Thou doest confirme his happinesse foreuer.

La. What is it?

Glo. That it would please thee leaue these sad desires
To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,
A presently repaire to Crosbie place,
Where after I haue solemnly entered
At Chertsie Monastery this noble King,
And wet his graue with my repentant teares,
I will with all expedient durie see you:
For diuers vnknowne reasons, I beseech you
Grant me this boone.

La. with all my heart, and much it ioyes me too,
To see you are become so penitent:

Tressill and Bartly goe a long with me.

Glo. Bid me farewell.

La. Tis more then you deserue:
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I haue sayd farewell alreadie

Exit.

Glo.

of Richard the Third.

Glo. Sirs, take vp the course,

Ser. Towards Chertsie noble Lord?

Glo. No to white Fryers there attend my committment:
Was euer woman in this humour wooed? Exunt All.

Was euer woman in this humour wonne?

Ile haue her, but I will not keepe her long.

What I haue kild her husband and her father,

To take her in her hearts extreamest heate:

With curses in her mouth teares in her eyes.

The bleeding witnesse of her hatred by:

Hauing God, her conscience, and these barres againe

And I nothing to backe my sute withall

But the plaine Diuel and dissembling lookes,

And yet to win her all the world is nothing? Hah?

Hath shee forgot already that braue Prince

Edward, her Lord, Whom I some three moneths since

Stabd in my angry mood at Tewkesbury?

A sweeter and louelier gentleman,

Framd in the prodigality of nature:

Yong, valiant, wise, and no doubt right royall,

The spacious world cannot againe afford.

And will she yet debace her eyes on me,

That cropt the golden prime of this sweet Prince,

And made her widdow to a woefull bed?

On me, whose all not equals Edwards moity,

On me that halt, and am vnshapen thus?

My Dukedome to be a beggerly denier,

I doe mistake my person all this while.

Vpon my life shee finds although I cannot

My selfe, to be a martialous proper man,

Ile be at charges for a Looking-glasse,

And entertaine some score or two of tailors

To studie fashions to adorne my body,

Since I am crept in fauour with my selfe,

I will maintaine it with a little cost.

But first ile turne yon fellow in his grate,

And then returne lamenting to my loue.

Shine out faire sunne, till I haue bought a glasse,

That I may see my shadow as I passe.

B 3